

RM-10787 is a good move forward. It will get more hams on the air. Element 1 should be just another portion of the exam process, if one wants to operate on the morse code portion of any band one justs needs to take element 1. The written exams should be all that is required, just like the no code tech, only allowed to operate on those modes one has quillified for.